To Whom It May Concern:

My name is Candi Davis, I am Chase Sullivan's ex-girlfriend. I met Chase around March 2014 it was only after a few dates that I realized this witty, intelligent and handsome man was my new love. We dated a little while longer before he moved in with me. We talked of our past and our future. There was many times he talked about his dad and how his absence in his life was challenging. Then after experiencing a divorce he was hesitant of love again. Chase had been married before and had a beautiful young daughter. She was definitely part of our life even though she lived far away. She would come visit and Chase would enjoy every moment with her. She shared his funniness and joke telling. They were a lot alike. Our life continued and our love for each other grew more. We took vacations together and had lots of fun. Chase would always be willing to help me with my projects around the house. If I wanted to paint he would paint with me. He loved the study of horticulture. He would plant flowers and love to landscape. Always had the yard looking good. We experienced ups and downs, I witnessed days of high anxiety where he would pace the floor and be nervous to days of deep depression and stay in bed all day. We worked on them and talked them through most of the time. Chase was devastated to hear the loss of his sister last year. At that point in life his mom needed him more than anything. He went to live with his mom and we always remained friends. Chase is a wonderful, caring, loving, whole hearted person. I was fortunate to have gotten to know and love him.

Sincerely,

Candi Davis
